Sustainable Development & Land Recycling: Policy, Funding, and Implementation

Register Today for Our August 13th, Fresno, California Workshop

Land recycling is the process of intelligently and equitably reusing vacant, abandoned, blighted, and contaminated properties in ways that benefit communities both economically and environmentally. This workshop is designed for redevelopment professionals from local governments, nonprofits, and the private sector with an interest in learning about redeveloping environmentally challenged property. Recycling abandoned and under-utilized properties requires special knowledge and skills to manage contaminant issues. This practical and interactive workshop will provide attendees with the tools, techniques and funding resources required to understand sustainable land recycling through and through - from policy, planning and implementation, to funding strategies and grants.

The workshop will be held at the CSU Fresno - University Business Center. Seasoned professionals will address current redevelopment initiatives and emerging topics such as sustainable land reuse, infill and transit development, and workforce development. Case studies will highlight a range of land recycling opportunities applicable to both rural and urban communities in California. Presenters include expert representatives from:

- U.S. EPA
- California State University, Fresno
- California High Speed Rail Authority
- Local Government Commission
- City of Fresno
- The Mayor's Office of Fresno
- Fresno Council of Governments
- Economic Development Corporation Serving Fresno County
- City of Lodi
- City of Stockton
- City of Visalia
- SCS Engineers
- Crowdbride
- Center for Creative Land Recycling
